

Our employees

Employees matter at Jungbunzlauer. We all intuitively know that no organisation can be successful in the long-term without engaged and competent people working well together and having the right tools to get the job done. So each and every one working at Jungbunzlauer is important. Embedded in our history and values lie a natural respect and appreciation of the individual. We simply care about each other.

Jungbunzlauer provides exactly that. We are big enough to be a global trendsetting player within our industry but we still have a manageable size providing a flat organisation, fast decisions and – most importantly – we very often know each other across functions and geography.

Any organisation or group of people working together faces challenges from time to time. From small to bigger challenges – we acknowledge that.

We aim to fulfil the aspirations of both the individual and the company by giving priority to training and education. And we always strive to build a long-term working relationship. So, having a workplace that offers both security and competitive employment terms is important.

Striking the right balance between the wishes of the individual and the requirement to create results as a company is important. But we actually believe that we all thrive better when being given responsibility, tasks and objectives. And the size of

But we believe that by addressing them openly and directly through a dialogue we actually provide the best conditions to solve problems.

Finally, we pride ourselves by our professional and competent organisation. Focused and empowered, aligned and ambitious. A tangible result of this is reflected by our ability to grow profitably while constantly investing in both our people and plants.
